

Presentation Design for the User Experience

Presented by David Uejio

President, Young Government Leaders

Special Assistant to the Director, NIH Office of Human Resources

Few words provoke a more visceral negative reaction than “PowerPoint.”
Learn how to use this and other visual tools responsibly by engaging your audience, framing your narrative and accentuating your story.

Dave Uejio currently serves as Special Assistant to the Director in the Office of Human Resources. Following his graduation from the University of Minnesota’s Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs with a Masters in Public Policy, Dave came to NIH as a Presidential Management Fellow. He is currently the principal analyst in the Office of the Director of OHR, overseeing the NIH’s employer branding, social media recruitment, and executive recruitment and onboarding programs. He also manages the Office’s Presidential Management Fellows.

Dave has a great deal of experience briefing senior leadership on pressing matters, as well as contributing as a member of the OHR leadership team. Dave is also the founding President of YGL’s Bethesda Chapter, and previously served as the Chief Strategic Officer of the YGL Executive Board. Dave is also well regarded as a public speaker, presenting on personal branding, public speaking, intergenerational recruitment strategies and social media at conferences and events across the country.

This Wednesday, November 9, 2011 6:30pm

Rockefeller Center, Room 002

RSVP online at <http://www.eventbrite.com/org/1149535815>

Hosted by the Nelson A. Rockefeller Center’s

Management & Leadership Development Program (MLDP) and Voxmasters