Committees are teams of at least three students with jurisdiction over different types of initiatives.

Committee Leadership positions are similar to exec board positions. They advise the President on their areas of expertise and update Chief of Staff on the progress of their work. These positions, however, have greater responsibility over managing junior assembly members. Chairs hold their own committee meetings. Vice-Chairs support the committee Chair and Project Directors take the lead with specific initiatives their committee or the General Assembly decides to take on.

The Student Services Committee provides services to improve the day-to-day quality of life of all students. Two areas to investigate in the upcoming year are making banner student course reviews accessible to the student body and moving the college readership program online.

The Residential Life Committee (also known as ResCom) concerns itself with the quality of student's living situations. ResCom works closely with administrators such as those in the Office of the Dean of the College and the Office of Residential Education to make sure their plans sufficiently address the needs of students. Potential projects for the upcoming year include a living/learning upperclassman floor with an entrepreneurship theme and partnership with Tuck. Committee members frequently have experience as a UGA.

The Diversity and Community Affairs Committee (otherwise known as DivCom) facilitates interactions between different groups on campus and challenges the greater student body to think critically about their identity and place at Dartmouth. This upcoming year DivCom plans to work closely with the Inter-Community Council and Office of Pluralism and Leadership to address hate speech, acts of intolerance and a promote a greater understanding of how to report bias.

The Mentorship Committee focuses on the expansion and further development of the freshman peer mentorship program. Members of the committee work closely with the Office of the Dean of the College to increase participation and survey satisfaction of participants in the freshman mentorship program.
